Follow-up on allocation and a few preferences

Hi,

Thanks for the call earlier this week. A few follow-up thoughts to add colour to the allocation note I sent on the 2nd, so the proposal reflects how I actually want this managed:

1. Fees and liquidity matter to me a lot. For every sleeve, please prioritise low-cost, liquid instruments — I would rather hold a plain, cheap ETF than a complex structured product. No lock-ups.
2. On the US equity sleeves (Nasdaq-100 and S&P 500): I am not comfortable buying at today's levels. Please keep these mostly in the money-market fund for now and only start adding once we see a 15-20% pullback from the recent highs. An initial 5% is fine, but no more until then.
3. Gold: I would like to build toward the 20% target, but only accumulate below USD 4,000/oz. Please don't chase it higher.
4. Bond fund: happy to build the medium-duration position in tranches over a few weeks. I am a little worried about what further rate moves would do to it — would appreciate your view in the write-up.
5. One planning note: I expect a liquidity event in Q4 — a property sale that should free up roughly USD 500k of additional cash to invest. Please keep some dry powder in mind and we can deploy it into the plan when it lands.

I am not a US person for tax. Please keep the proposal simple enough that I can follow the reasoning.

Best, Kadir
